

WHAT

Riche Bistro & Yu, a new eatery focusing on both Western and spicy Sichuan classics

WHERE

At the basement of a shopping mall in Hong Kong's North Point district

WHO

Oscar Chan of PLOTCREATIVE Interior Design Limited

HOW

The 300sq m restaurant is designed to look like an origami wood box. Timber is the main material used, alongside stone, leather and stainless steel elements. Inside, one of the walls is covered in plants. There are two small private dining areas that can seat up to six people each. The organic patterns on the red-and-white dining chairs and the stylistic patterns on the flooring offset the restaurant's warm environment.

WHY

Because the client wanted the restaurant's interiors to exemplify the fusion cuisine served. Hence, Chan created contrasts between the geometric patterns on the walls and the green backdrop. "Through these juxtapositions, the diner is at once confronted with a design that is natural yet artificial, organic yet regular," he explains.

Photography by Oscar Chan

